1873	18 April	Deddington, OXF	in magistrates court	Joseph Woods , of Deddington, a dealer in old metal, was charged by Inspector Jones for that he, on the 10th of April inst., did unlawfully purchase a quantity of brass under the weight of 56lbs. The Inspector said that about three o'clock in the afternoon he met Woods between North Aston and Steeple Aston. He had a small hand-cart, in which, on searching, he found a quantity of brass tied up in a handkerchief, under some rags and bones; it weighed 3lbs, 14 oz. He asked him how he came by it, and he said he had purchased it of some woman, but he did not know whom. There was an accident at Lower Heyford Station about a month ago, and four similar brasses were missing. Mary Dunn, of Steeple Aston, said that she had sold the brass to Woods; he gave her 6d., and said that if it came to more he would pay her another time. The defendant pleaded ignorance of the law in the case. Fined 1s., and costs, including police fees and witnesses' expenses, 18s. which Mrs. Woods, who appeared to be treasurer, paid.	Jackson's Oxford Journal , 26 April 1873, 6

1866	25 September	Oxford, OXF	in magistrates court	John Potter, a carrier, of Stanton Harcourt, was charged with driving a horse unfit for work. The case was substantiated by Sergt. Mills, from whose evidence it appeared that there were several wounds, some of which were fresh, and one bleeding. P.C. Soames corroborated this testimony, stating that he had never seen a horse in worse condition. Other evidence was given, and defendant was convicted in a penalty of 1 l. and 1 l. 12s. costs, the Mayor stating that he had himself inspected the animal, which was in a pitiable condition. It was an act of gross inhumanity to employ it. The Bench expressed their obligations to Professor Wall and the Rev. 1892	5 March	Oxford, St. Ebbe, OXF	playing music	[At the Inquest] Maximillian Charles Mitchell, carrier, Cumnor, said deceased was formerly a carrier, and was his father-in-law. He had done nothing regular of late. Witness had seen him frequently lately. He was always a strong man, and lived by himself. When he was a carrier he used to drink, but of late years he was temperate. He played at public-houses, and witness saw him on Saturday at the "Balloon," Queen-street. He left him at six o'clock.	The Oxford Times 19 March 1892, 5
1892	8 March	Oxford, OXF		[At the Inquest] James Holloway, 4, Nelson-yard, St. Aldate's, labourer, said he had known deceased for some time. On Tuesday witness was in Mr. Ward's wharf, Park End-street, about half-past five, and saw deceased. Witness told him the wharf was about to be closed for the night, and he made no answer. Witness went to the foreman, and said he thought deceased was ill. The foreman came and tried to get him up, but found he could not stand. He was sitting on a box where he had been working. Deceased was afterwards put on to a trolley and taken home. He did not speak, but seemed sensible. On arriving at the house the deceased took a key from his pocket, unlocked the door, and went in. Witness asked if they should help him upstairs, but he refused their assistance,and [sic] said he should be better to-morrow. As witness left, the deceased shut the door, and he heard him lock it.	The Oxford Times 19 March 1892, 5
1892	10 March	Oxford, OXF		[At the Inquest, Maximillian Charles Mitchell, said that] On Thursday morning witness had a letter from H.J. Owen, the landlord of the house, to say that the deceased was brought home ill on Tuesday night by four men, and he had not been seen since. Witness went to the house the same morning about twelve o'clock, and knocked several times, but had no answer. He then borrowed an iron bar and opened the door. On going upstairs to his bedroom he found deceased lying partly on the bed quite dead. He	The Oxford Times 19 March 1892, 5 was fully dressed with the exception of his shoes being off. There was a candle on the table in the room, but it had apparently not been lighted. He believed deceased died naturally. His shoes were close to him, and it appeared as if he was about to undress and get into bed.

1843	mid June	Oxford, OXF	in county court	Thomas Hall applied for a warrant of ejectment against John Phipps, to recover possession of a cottage at Garsington, now and for some years back in the occupancy of Phipps as a weekly tenant. It was proved in evidence that Phipps received on the 14th of May a written notice to leave, since which time he has paid no rent; notice of the intended proceedings against him was also given. Phipps not appearing, a warrant to issue was granted.	The Oxford Chronicle and Reading Gazette , 17 June 1843, 4

1852	9 October	Burford, OXF	pitched a dancing booth	This town was a concentrated scene of animation on Saturday last, the first "Mop" being held on that day. The weather was propitious, which induced numbers to enjoy the holiday. Dancing booths (and here the commodious, well-conducted, elastic "deals" from Brizenorton stand first), raree shows, and divers other enchantments to captivate the gay, were provided in profusion, and met with liberal support...Saturday next will conclude these annual festivities.		The Banbury Guardian , 14 October 1852, 3

1855	25 September	Burford, OXF	failed to appear at the annual September fair	This celebrated and long established meeting took place on Tuesday the 25th ult., and the day proving remarkably fine, with harvest operations completed, attracted, according to usual custom, a goodly number of buyers and sellers. The amount of business transacted was great, and proved of a satisfactory character. It was a remarkably quiet day, there being no show nor members of the "legitimate drama" present; even that regular appendage, the Brize-Norton dancing booth, whose spirited proprietor heretofore indulged the "rurals" with a cheap trip, was " non est ."		Jackson's Oxford Journal , 6 October 1855, 8

1859	26 August	Bampton, OXF	pitched a dancing booth	The pleasure portion of the fair was a sad failure; there was an almost total absence of shows, owing, probably, to Oxford races being held on the same day...we must not omit to notice the temple dedicated to Terpschicore [sic], erected by one Mr. Brodiss, where the sons and daughters of Agricola exhibited their saltatory powers to the strains of an old cracked fiddle and a miserable-sounding tambourine, to their hearts' content, time being kept by the stamping of the iron clad extremities of the rustics.		Jackson's Oxford Journal , 3 September 1859, 5
1862	11 October	Filkins, OXF	pitched a dancing booth	Our annual feast was held on Sunday last, and although the weather was very unpropitious, the rain falling the whole day in torrents, the village presented quite an animated appearance. On Monday there was a large company of holiday-seekers assembled together, with numerous stalls, round-about, swing boats, &c. The renowned Brize Norton dancing booth pitched in the "Five Alls" yard attracted a large assemblage of dancers.		The Faringdon Advertiser , 18 October 1862, 4

				the whole village. Stalls, &c., with the renowned Brize-Norton dancing booth, pitched in the "Five Alls" yard, together with the shooting gallery, and Mr. Mills' confectionary stall, which attracted considerable attention, chiefly from their owners' sallies of wit and humour.
1865	2 May	Burford, OXF	played for the Jack-in-the-Green perambulations	The well-known fiddler, George Brodie [sic], accompanied the sweeps on May-day, and on returning to his van he accidentally set it on fire. He was dreadfully burnt, and having been taken to the house of the master-sweep, (Smith, of Burford,) he lingered until Wednesday last, when he expired.	The Faringdon Advertiser , 13 May 1865, 4
1865	9 May	Burford, OXF	died	On the 11th inst. an inquest was held before F. Westell, Esq., at the Swan Inn, on the body of George Brodist, the well-known owner of a dancing-booth that frequented all our local fairs. From the evidence of Richard Forrest it appeared that the deceased had been round the town on the 2nd of May with the sweeps, who, with a "jack-in-the-green," fiddler, &c., paraded the streets, and that, after the day's work was over, he let his fiddle [sic] to be used in the "White Horse," for the amusement of the company (the woman with whom he lived waiting for it), and went to the back lane to his van. On Forrest's coming out of the Swan he saw a light over the opposite houses, and soon met Brodist with nothing on but the remains of his shirt, and the hair all burnt off his head. He was taken to Smith's, the sweep. The foreman asked Forrest if deceased was drunk? Forrest - No, sir, he was just right. Foreman - What do you mean by being just right? Forrest - Why, just as he ought to be, Sir. Foreman - Had he been drinking? Forrest - Yes, but he was not drunk. Foreman - Well, was he in his usual state? Forrest - No, sir, he was just right; he had enough, and went to his van without anyone helping him. From the evidence of Charlotte Tims (who appeared to be in much mental agony and suffering from a tumour in the back, said to be the effects of a kick from deceased), it appeared that on the night in question a quantity of children's clothes were hung up in the van to dry, and that, although there was no fire in the van, there was a box of matches and candle, which she supposed he must have lighted and thus set the place on fire, which, in addition to bed, &c., contained 3 lbs. of powder and guns, belonging to their shooting gallery. The deceased lingered in dreadful agony up till the 9th inst. Verdict, "Accidental death."	The Oxford Chronicle & Berks & Bucks Gazette , 20 May 1865, 7
1865	10 May	Burford, OXF	inquest	An inquest was held at Burford, on the 10th inst, before F. Westell, Esq., Coroner, on the body of a man named Geo. Broadist, who was described as a traveller, aged 45 years. The deceased travelled with a shooting gallery and dancing booth, and on the night of the 2nd inst. he went to his van for the purpose of sleeping; soon after he got there the van was observed to be on fire, and the deceased standing near it in his shirt, very severely burnt, all his hair being completely scorched off his head; an alarm was given, and assistance promptly rendered, when he was conveyed to a neighbour's house, and attended by a medical man, where, notwithstanding the severeness of his burns, he survived till the 9th inst. A woman, who travelled with him, gave evidence to show that there was no fire in the van when he went to it, there were only some matches and candles, and it is presumed that while endeavouring to obtain a light he set himself and van on fire. Verdict, "Accidentally burnt to death."	Jackson's Oxford Journal , 20 May 1865, 8

The charge on which the prisoners were now being punished arose from the female prisoner Charlotte Jarvis having represented herself to be a widow with two young children, as in a destitute condition. She had produced a list of fictitious	The Abingdon and Reading Herald , 19 October 1872, 6

Defendant, a publican at Piddington, was summoned for 1 l. 10s., damages, for having detained plaintiff's violin. Defendant said he had the violin, and was willing to give it up. This his Honour ordered him to do forthwith, and then suggested that the costs should be paid between them. This was not acquiesced in, and the question of costs proceeded. It appeared that the plaintiff and companions had lodged with the defendant, who had kept a beer-house at Marsh Gibbon, and that he kept the fiddle till a claim of 4s. 1d. was paid. Steward said his portion of the claim was but 1s. 1d., which he offered to pay. His Honour said as defendant was not an innkeeper he had no lien. Judgement was in consequence given against him.	The Oxford Chronicle , 24 May 1851, 3
